KNIGHTS TEMPLAR PLANS HUMMING

LOCAL COMMANDERY IS HONORED IN SECURING FIELD DAY HERE.

Plans for the big Knights Templar field day which is to be held here Oct. 3 began to materialize with the appointment of committees to take charge of arrangements for the occasion Friday evening. Between 600 and 800 visiting Knights and their ladies are expected here on the above date and commanderies from Detroit, Hillsdale, Adrian, Jackson, Monroe, Howell and Northville will participate.

The local commandery is especially honored because of the decision to have the state conclave here as the local lodge is in its first year of existence. It is the first time that any commandery in the state has been awarded the state conclave in its first year and is due to the success of the local lodge in its membership drive. Ninety-three men are now full-fledged members and it is expected that one hundred will be members by the time of the conclave.

It is believed that the Detroit comandery No. 1, the finest drill commandery in the country, will be here with about eight platoons; Jackson will have four platoons. The local committee is waiting for word from the state heads in Detroit before further announcements will be made.

M. M. Read was chosen general chairman of the entire event and assisting him are a number of able committees.

Fred Gallup is chairman of the committee on horses. Five horses are required for the occasion, and these will be procured and cared for by Mr. Gallup and his committee.

The Normal athletic park will be secured and grandstands placed both there and on Michigan avenue down town. Charles Clark, George Moorman and George Geer are the committee in charge.

Joe Fisk, Richard Everard and George Handy comprise the publicity committee. Dr. James, Dr. George, Joe Dell and W. B. Eddy serve as committee both for headquarters and refreshments. A dinner will be served and places secured for this part of the day's program.

The committee on decorations comprises H. E. Van de Walker, O. C. Eckley and Fred Weinmann. C. T. Moore and his De Molay boys, assisted by the entire commandery, will be the reception committe.e

T. E. Schaible, A. E. Lewis and T. L. Towner are the committee on autos to convey the visiting Knights and ladies about, and E. G. Wiedman is chairman of a committee to have charge of parking. He is to select his own assistants.

JOBS FOR VALUATION ENGINEERS AT $3600

The collection of the income tax becomes a complicated affair after it passes the point of figuring the return of the average wage earner. That part, of course ,is simple.

The technical staff of the bureau of internal revenue at Washington is in need of valuation engineers in general mining, coal mining, oil and gas, and the forest industry. The positions pay from $3,600 to $4,800 a year. The United States civil service commission will receive applications until Oct. 1. No written examinations will be given; the ratings will be based upon education, training, experience and physical ability.

The duties involve estimation of quantities, market values, value of equipment, cost of development, etc.

Full information and application blanks may be secured from the United States civil service commission, Washington, D. C., or the civil service board at the postoffice or customhouse in any city.

DECISION RESERVED IN CASE OF BENNS-STEVENS.

Justice Stadtmiller on Wednesday tried the case of Harry Benns vs. Ben Stevens. Benns sued Stevens for work and borrowed money. Stevens testified he paid back Benns the labor and money. He had two witnesses who testified that he had paid Benns. Decision was reserved.

ANOTHER RECKLESS DRIVER PAYS FINE.

Andrew King, Ypsilanti, pleaded guilty Wednesday before Justice Stadtmiller to a charge of reckless driving preferred by Chief Connors. He paid a fine of $25. Chief Connors alleges he was driving recklessly and had his muffler or cut-out open. He was seriously injured three months ago when his car turned turtle on Washtenaw road.

ROTARIANS CONSIDER BASEBALL MONDAY

At the Rotary luncheon Monday the subject of the program was baseball, the second of a series of talks of American sports. The program was in charge of Rotarian Dan B. South. Slips were passed out to the players in the recent game between the Rotary and Kiwanias containing three questions, viz., their experience, the most extraordinary play they had ever seen and the greatest present-day player.

It was the opinion of most of those taking part in the program that Ty Cobb was the greatest ball player of the day. Some thought that Johnson, McGraw, Matthewson nand Ruth were the greatest. The program was very interesting and brought out some good baseball dope.

There will be no meeting at the clubhouse next Monday noon, but a picnic dinner will be served at the grove at the Country club in the evening, following the golf tournament in the afternoon.

The following guests were present: Hon. Charles A. Sink, colm, W. N. Benge and B. E. Roscoe O. Bonisteel and J. K. Mal-Harkins, of Ann Arbor; Fred A. Mellencamp, of Warsaw, Ind., George E. Lang and J. G. Zabel, of Monroe.

26TH. REUNION OF SLAYTON FAMILY HERE

The twenty-sixth reunion of the Slayton family was held last Thursday at the home of Mrs. Charles Emens, 514 Cross street. Sixty members of the family were present, coming from Detroit, Redford, Highland Park, Holly, Dundee, Charlotte, Morenci, Saline and Chicago, Ill., and Toledo, Ohio.

The banquet was served on the lawn and the address of welcome given by Merlin Kopka. The family history is very interesting and dates back to 1690, when Thomas Slayton, an orphan of 10 years, was brought to Boston. The family has 1,200 known members of direct descent from the founder. There were five generations present at the reunion.

The next reunion will be held in Dundee.

MISS MARGARET BROOKS WRITES OF TRAVELS

Mrs. W. P. Brooks just received a letter from her daughter, Miss Margaret Brooks, who is traveling abroad, telling about the quaintness of Nurenburg, the wide streets of Munich and the many public squares with a statue in nearly every square commemorating an emperor of the war of 1837. The linden trees give out their fragrance like honeysuckle for many blocks.

She spent hours in the art galleries and attended a German operetta, which she enjoyed in spite of the fact she could not understand it. On her way to Ommeramergau the mountain scenery was wonderful. She stayed in Ommeramergau Saturday to Monday. The people dressed very odd and old fashioned. The food was good but the coffee poor.

Five masses in succession were celebrated Sunday morning early. Then the Passion Play started at 8 o'clock and continued eight hours, with intermission for dinner. Miss Brooks said the tableaux were perfect, the coloring beautiful and the whole too wonderful to describe. The crowd was immense and the weather very hot. Five people fainted.

She stayed while there at the home of the brother of Anton Lang, who took the part of Christ in the Passion Play. She next visited Innesbruck, writing that she felt disappointed in the buildings there. For nine cents in our money she purchased a glass of beer and heard the Tyrolese singers. She said: "We are glad to shake the dust of Germany off our feet. There is no trouble in bringing things out of Germany."

COMMITTEE PICKS DATES FOR STYLE FESTIVAL

Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 27 and 28, were the dates chosen Tuesday by the better business committee of the Board of Commerce for the showing of Ypsilanti's third anuual style show and autumn festival. Plans outlined by the committee show that the festival will be more elaborate than any given in he past.

It is planned this year to have a mammoth parade to attract the interest and co-operaion of residents in every section of the county.

Robert W. Hemphill, Sr., passed away at his home here at 1:15 o'clock Friday afternoon following a long illness. He was born in Clinton, Lenawee county, Jan. 4, 1839, and came to Ypsilanti when 12 years of age to attend the Ypsilanti seminary. He had lived here since with the exception of a few years spent in Chicago in the eighteen-fifties.

He was assistant postmaster of Ypsilanti in 1855-6. He helped organize the First National bank and was a member of the first board of directors. He was also a member of the firm of Follett, Conklin & Co. and of the N. Follett & Co., private bankers. Later he was a member of the private banking firm of Cornwell, Hemphill & Co., that being changed to the name of Hemphill. Batchelder & Co. when Mr. Cornwell retired and the late D. C. Batchelder became a member of the firm in his place.

Mr. Hemphill was instrumental in organizing the Ypsilanti Woolen Mill company, the Ypsilanti Flouring Mill company and later he, with Cornelius Cornwell, started the papermaking industry in this city, Mr. Hemphill being presdent of the Ypsilanti Paper company.

He was foremost in constructing the first electric railway and in establishing the electric light and power industry in this city and was treasurer of the Mchigan State Normal for 16 years and city treasurer for 17 years. Under his guiding hand the waterworks, sewers and paving were begun. For over 60 years he labored to promote, build up and beautify Ypsilanti. At the time of his retirement he was the oldest banker in Michigan.

Mr. Hemphill was a Mason of years' standing, one of the oldest in the state. For nearly 35 years he served on the vestry of St. Luke's Episcopal church. In politics he was a Democrat.

He is survived by three children, R. W. Hemphill, Jr., and Mrs. Wilford D. Crocker, of this ctiy, and Charles M. Hemphill, of Clearwater, Florida; also by one sister, Mrs. David Woodward, of Clinton.

The funeral was held from his late residence, 219 North Huron street, at 2:30 Monday, with interment in Highland cemetery. Rev. Berton

COUNTY FAIR HAS $750 PREMIUMS FOR BREEDS

To encourage the raising of better beef cattle in this territory the Washtenaw County fair, Ann Arbor, Sept. 19 to 23, inclusive, is offering $750 in premiums for the leading breeds.

Many letters have been received by the fair management asking about the show. The breeds for which the prizes are offered include Shorthorns, Polled Durhams, Herefords, and Red Poll. More than sixty animals are expected to enter the exhibit this year, according to Superintendent Jay A. Smith, in charge of the beef cattle department. Entries will close on Sept. 16.

Farmers who are thinking of buying a pure-bred bull are being urged by the fair to put off such a purchase until he has looked over the herds which will be exhibited.

An outstanding feature of the most extensive evening shows ever undertaken by the Washtenaw County fair will be more than fifty mammoth fireworks events to be presented in front of the grandstand, comprising a special two-hour program.

The fair management has contracted with the Thearle-Duffield Fireworks company of Chicago, pyrotechnists for practically all the great exposition in the country, to furnish the Washtenaw fair with their very best display fireworks program for each night.

The program arranged will not be a monotonous procession of rockets and blazing pin-wheels. It is a succession of more than fifty dazzling special attractions, such as "Chasing the Bolshevists," "Circus Clowns," "A Thousand Glow Worms," "Radium Dazzlers," "A Summer Storm," "Niagara Falls," and numerous elaborate scenic and action features.

Huge bomb shells creating gorgeous displays in the sky are included in the program, also "Pharaoh's Dream," "Sheaves of Wheat" and "The Frightened Goblins"—little figures that dart about in terror.

Varied humorous and beautiful events are introduced. "The Flight of the Fairies" is an exceptionally beautiful number, while "The "Water Wagon Special" is uproariously funny.

Washtenaw is the only county fair in this part of the state to have nightly displays of fireworks.

Get your State fair tickets at The Record office and save the trouble and time buying them at the grounds.

THE HURON NEARING COMPLETION RAPIDLY

Monday saw the beginning of the work of laying the forms for the top floor of The Huron, Ypsilanti's new community hotel. Every indication points toward the completion of all the concrete form work by the end of the week.

Bricklayers are now working on the rear wall of the hotel and this work has progressed past the height of the first story. Concrete stairs inside the building will be started within 10 days. Workmen are carryng tile to the first four floors in preparation for the construction of the walls.

Most of the basement plumbing has already been installed by the Hankinson company, and plumbers are now working on the second and third floors.

The hotel furnishing committee is about to place orders on a large part of the hotel equipment and it was stated Monday morning that all the hotel furnishings will be contracted for within four weeks.

The committee does not expect any difficulties because of the lack of material due to inability to ship at this time. They purchased a supply of cement and brick, etc., several weeks ago and have sufficient on hand to keep the various workmen busy for at least six weeks.

The committee also reports that the building of the hotel is going according to schedule and that if nothing unforseen happens the hotel will be completed by Thanksgiving as has been planned.

A sign is still hanging on the temporary building on Washinton street informing the public that laborers are wanted.

AUTO THIEF ADMITS STEALING LOCAL CARS

Joe Ekman, Russian, 10 years in this country, was brought back from Detroit and arraigned before Justice Stadtmiller Tuesday morning on a charge of stealing the automobile belonging to Will J. Renton.

Ekman waived examination and was bound over to the circuit court in Ann Arbor. His bail was fixed at $6,000, which he did not furnish, and he was taken to the county jail.

Ekman told officers that he also stole W. A. Van Wegen's car here. He said that he worked on a farm near here for eight months last summer.

LUTHERAN CHURCH CORNERSTONE LAYING AUGUST 27.

Sunday afternoon, August 27, at 2:30 o'clock the cornerstone of the new Lutheran church building will be laid. Neighboring congregations are expected to be present and the local pastor will be assisted by outside pastors.

The exterior of the building, which is of stone, will be completed before cold weather sets in, and the interior will be done during the winter months.

BEAL REFUSES OFFICE OF CO. FUEL ADMINISTRATOR

Junius E. Beal, of Ann Arbor, appointed by State Fuel Administrator Potter as his choice for county fuel administrator for Washtenaw county, has declined to accept the appointment on the grounds that his business would prevent him from giving the time necessary to the administration of the county's fuel problem. Announcement of this was made in Ann Arbor Tuesday.

The state fuel administrator has been notified of his refusal and in all probability another appointment will soon be made. It is understood that Ray A. Dolph, president of the Ann Arbor Chamber of Commerce, will accept the appointment.

Ypsilanti's fuel situation remains unchanged. Several local dealers have receved some coal for which they placed orders months ago. Coal is being distributed to consumers in small lots, so that everyone will have coal to start the cold weather with.

The surplus in local yards remains unchanged and the local Board of Commerce fuel committee is still endeavoring to expidite shipment of coal ordered by dealers.

PACK EXONERATED BY CORONER'S JURY

A coroner's jury Thursday night completely exonerated Sheriff A. C. Pack for the shooting of Dominic Gantile, of Ann Arbor, Tuesday evening on the Whitmore Lake road. After listening to the testimoney of seven witnesses the jury deliberated but a short time and returned the verdict as directed by Coroner Samuel W. Burchfield.

Mrs. Gantile, pretty, bobbed-haired wife of Gantile, listened intently to the testimony of the witnesses and save for softly crying at times made no demonstration.

One of the women witnesses admitted that she had known for six months that Gantile was a bootlegger. Another testified that the night of the shooing Gantile had come to her home with a letter from his wife, who was then in the east, that he wanted read. At this time he displayed a gun and said that he was going to Whitmore Lake.

FRIENDS GET FORMAZ FROM JAIL SUNDAY

Wm. A. Formaz, of Ecorse, was released Sunday evening from the jail here when friends brought in the $100 fine that he was sentenced to pay Saturday by Justice Stadtmiller or serve 60 days in the Detroit house of correction.

A check was tendered the police Saturday night for his release, but they refused to accept it.

Formaz pleaded guilt Saturday to driving an automobile while drunk. He and Alec Avde were driving at a high rate of speed early Saturday morning, when their car was wrecked at the Miles street bridge. Avde suffered a broken arm and painful bruises. The car, a Buick touring, was a complete wreck.

FOREIGNERS CHASE YOUNG LADY—CONNORS CALLED.

Chief of Police Connors was called early Wednesday morning to 28 South Summit street, where Miss Irene Walling alleges she was being chased by two foreign looking men. Chief Connors was unable to get any clue to the men from the descriptions given.

KIWANIS HEAR DETROIT BANKER

BANKER FLAYS SENATE—SAYS WE ARE KNOWN AS "INTERNATIONAL BOOBS."

Mr. C. C. Gilliland, president of the Bankers' Finance Corporation of Detroit, spoke here Wednesday before the Kiwanis club on "What is Fundamentally Wrong With the U. S. Merchant Marine?"

He said: "What this country needs now more than anything else is an American merchant marine owned and operated by 100 per cent Americans. An American merchant marine is an economic necessity. America today is facing the most serious crisis she has ever faced. England and other foreign nations refer to us as the international boob. During the war our shipbuilders were building wooden pill boxes, because the foreign nations said we had not time to build good ships.

"When the government controlled the railroads we would have made money if we had had an American merchant marine owned and operated by 100 per cent Americans. Hands across the sea and all of that is very fine, but that does not enter into business with our rivals. Our statesmen have not done their duty. Our present senate and congress are doing nothing. They are a lot of Benedict Arnolds, Pontius Pilates and a good-for-nothing bunch. Every bit of legislation is pigeon-holed.

"This new proposed merchant marine subsidy is only a smoke screen to fool the voters. Our entrance into foreign countries with what ships we have is controlled by British charts. A bill to have our own charts was pigeon-holed as of no account. The policy of foreign nations is to get our ships by absorbing or destroying them. Foreigners at present are dictating prices of manufactured products.

"If this continues it will bring taxes up and wages down. That is what caused the revolution in Russia. We have lost 75 per cent of our trade with Brazil and other South American countries. We have been driven out by England and other foreign countries. Fifty-four per cent of our soldiers in the World war were carried by foreign ships. If we have incompetent men in our offices and business places we kick them out. We must do the same with our congressmen and senators who have betrayed us at Washington and elect men who are competent and who are true Americans."

CITY CHAMPION RACE NARROWS TOURNAMENT

M. B. Stadtmiller cinched his hold as champion horseshoe pitcher of the second league of Recreation park Monday morning by rising at 6 o'clock and defeating E. A. Mellencamp at the partk by a score of 50-29.

Tuesday night Stadtmiller defeated Alfred Colf 50-24. The race for city championship is narrowing. Two games Friday evening and the final game Tuesday of next week will decide who wears the laurels. F. E. Raymond, by defeating B. Page by a 50-25 score, claims the championship of the east side.

EDWARD RILEY INJURED IN MOTOR ACCIDENT

Edward Riley, 18, of 116 Towner street, sustained several cuts about the face and a broken bone in one hand when the machine in which he was riding with Howard Bush Saturday evening went into the ditch on Michigan avenue east of the city. Mr. Riley turned out to pass another car which was coming toward him and whose lights blinded him. He was taken to Beyer hospital, where his injuries were cared for. The machine was badly damaged. Mr. Bush was not injured.

THOMPSON PAYS FOR TREES AND COSTS

The case of the people vs. Joe Thompson, plasterer, was settled Wednesday when Thompson paid for the trees and also the court costs. He was accused by Harry Mosley of the larceny of three fruit trees valued at $4. Thompson claims he thought the trees were on land on which he had purchased a building.

HAM, EGGS, AND GREEN OLIVES

Friends pop in for a meal and no meal is ready—what woman has not been in this predicament? This recipe solves the problem nicely: Eggs, bread, butter and a bottle of green olives always on hand, parsley in the garden, ham in the corner store—and you have everything you need.

Put one-half pound boiled ham through the food chopper and fry in a little butter. Add six eggs and mix thoroughly. Stir in one cup chopped Spanish green olives and one teaspoonful minced parsley. Serve hot on buttered toast. It's delicious.

CHAPTER XIV.

"God-Almighty, Polly brat!" exclaimed Larry Bishop one evening, "what made you come out a night like this, huh?"

The girl went to the stove and in silence extended her hands over its top.

"What's up, Pollyop?" the man demanded again, curiously, dropping into a chair. "You look something awful!"

And so she did! The long-lashed eyes had gathered and held an indefinable expression of hatred. The fair, lovely face knew tender sympathy no more. She was no longer Polly of the Sun. For her that orb had become merely a ball in the sky, hot like the stove and bright like the candle flame, only more so. Nor did the pale winter moon ever catch her dazzling smiles. The winking stars had forgotten weeks ago that once a squatter girl had stolen out nightly to throw upward a kiss, begging them to deliver it to the crucified one there beyond them—the good Jesus who sat on the golden throne and who had sent her the message by Granny Hope that "Love were stronger'n hate any day."

As usual her feet were in Jeremiah's boots, and as usual she wore his coat. Her curls were covered with snow, and as she studied the dark-faced man she shook drops of water from them.

She advanced toward him, choking with emotion. Since Wee Jerry had gone, her hours, spent in planning revenge, had completely exhausted her. She was so tired that when she reached Larry she crouched before him on the floor and turned a pale, beseeching face up to him.

"I've come, Larry Bishop," she began gravely, "to ask you to help me to even up a little with Old Marc."

The squatter's head went up, and a startled expression shot into his fierce eyes. Then he sank lower in his chair, and the fire died out of his countenance.

"Who can get even with that d—n brute?" he muttered after a while. "Squatters can't! We'd all go to Auburn if we muss up him or his'n."

A white young face shoved so close to his that Bishop drew back.

"Who cares a d—n about Auburn?" Pollyop exclaimed roughly. "We won't go there till we've tore Old Marc's heart to pieces an' made it hurt like yours does, Larry, like mine does for Jerry an' Daddy Hopkins. Wouldn't you be willin' to spend a few years in jail if you could make him howl an' go almost mad like me an' you have, Larry?"

Bishop looked beyond her head into a dark corner. It was in that spot he often imagined he saw the wraith of his woman. His unsteady regard settled; and the ghost woman rose mistily, gazing at him with unearthly eyes. Then the pale, unsmiling phantom extended her arms and within them appeared a frail infant.

"God!" burst from his lips like a shot from a gun.

Pollyop glanced backward over her shoulder. But the shudder that ran over him brought her haggard face back to his.

"Ain't your heart hurtin' something awful for your Betty woman an' your brat now, this very minute?" she queried abruptly, as if she, too, had seen the ghastly thing in the corner.

"God, yes!" he shivered, taking firm hold of his chin to hide the tremble of it.

She seized his arm viselike, the grip drawing a groan from the squatter.

"An' wouldn't you just love to see Old Marc twist an' squirm like a stepped-on baby snake, huh?" came in one long, sobbing breath.

Again the shifty look of the tortured man came to rest on the gloom beyond.

"I'd die for it, so I would, Pollyop," he cried. "Out with what you got in your bean, Poll; an' I'll listen, so help me God!"

Pollyop leaned heavily against him, panting. She was making an effort to tell him her plan. With a swift upward motion of her head, she began to talk in broken tones; and as she proceeded, Larry Bishop raised straighter in his chair.

Polly's voice trailed into silence; and Larry sent one hasty look over her head. The wraith smiled sadly at him and was gone. He shook himself and struggled to his feet. Then, a broad, wicked grin spread his lips apart, and he laughed aloud. Pollyop, still on the floor, laughed, too, hysterical sobs catching at her throat, and a desire to scream forcing her hands to her mouth. Such awful sounds were unusual in the Silent City, where even honest mirth was no longer heard because the men and women scarcely dared breathe for fear an enemy from Ithaca would suddenly appear.

"Glory be to God!" ejaculated the man, hoarsely, "that's the how of it, brat! It'll be a whack for my dead woman, an'—"

"An' a good whack for the Hopkins tribe, too," cried Polly, scrambling up.

She Turned to the Door but Halted With Her Hand on the Latch.

"It'll be a black Thanksgiving for Old Marc, huh, Larry?—I'm goin' back home now."

She turned to the door, but halted with her hand on the latch.

"You promised I could do it, Larry," she reminded him. "You'll tell Lye Braeger that, too, won't you?"

Sinking limply into his chair, Bishop wiped his wet lips.

"Yep, lass," he assented with a groan. "You can turn the trick; I promise you that."

If Jeremiah Hopkins had seen his girl, his Polly of the Sun, when she went home that night, he would not have recognized her. Her face was crafty, pitiless, and as white as the snow under her feet.

Then she waited stoically day after day, feeding the billy goat but absent-mindedly, asking no questions of Larry or Lye Braeger how soon her idea could be carried out. She believed that they would leave no stone unturned to even up with Marcus MacKenzie.

Early one evening Larry Bishop burst into the Hopkins hut without the formality of a knock. He looked years older than he had but yesterday; and Pollyup got up, locking and interlocking her fingers.

"Well?" she asked from between chattering teeth.

"It's done, by God!" he hissed, almost strangling behind a shaking hand. "It were most awful, Polly. If I'd stuck a hog in the gizzard, the squealin' couldn't 'a' been worser."

The speaker's tones, his half-bent figure, his shifty glances, brought a grunt from the girl.

"An' you're gettin' sorry by the minute, Larry Bishop, I can see that," she returned, giving him a smart rap. "Stand up, Larry man. Once—" A sudden rush of emotion thrust into her throat such an ache that for several seconds she was unable to conclude. "Once," she repeated, after clearing away the huskiness with a hacking cough, "I thought love were the greatest thing in the world. But it ain't, Larry Bishop, it ain't!"

Bishop fidgeted with his cap, turning it around and around by its brim When he looked up, the burning glow had died from the depths of his eyes.

"It's a sickenin' thing to see a woman suffer that bad," he muttered. "God, brat!—Nope! Don't say nothin' till I tell you what me an' Lye did!"

At the memory of it, the speaker wiped drops of sweat from his face.

"She bellered about lovin' her ma," droned Bishop, "an' the way she hollered in my hut for her man was something scand'lous."

"Like your Betty died a-howlin' for you, I s'pose, Larry," came back the girl promptly. "An' I been thinkin' all day how Granny Hope tucked your dead brat alongside his mammy in the comm. Some awful thinkin', Larry man!"

The squatter's sudden grayness and swallowing hard as if something had stuck in his windpipe was the only evidence he gave that he had heard the cruel words.

"We got 'er just after dark," he continued, woefully. "She's been tied up in my shack ever since."

"Good 'nough for 'er!" gasped Polly, tensely, rolling her hands in her apron.

"An' she yelled so hard you could've heard her near to Ithaca, Poll," moaned Larry. "Me an' Lye gagged 'er."

"Holy smut!" fell from Pollyop, as the picture his words had made burned itself across her mind.

"Her man's been gone all day to Portland," continued the squatter in a monotone. "Lye found out 'bout Mrs. Robertson's been tryin' to reach hold of him."

"Hope she don't!" interjected Polly. "Not till we get done with his woman. Are you goin' to tote her over here?"

The man nodded.

"Don't dare to till later, when the squatters is in bed," he answered, slapping on his cap. "If—if you change your mind, Poll, come along over; an' I'll cut 'er loose an' let 'er go."

A harsh sound, something like a chuckle of malicious satisfaction, slipped through Polly's lips and stopped the man at the door.

"That ain't no ways likely, Larry," she said huskily. "Bring 'er here, an' when I'm done with her, she'll have to be took."

She caught Bishop by the arm, whirling him around.

"An' listen, Larry," she continued with cruel emphasis, "an' all the time keep rememberin' how Betty wailed her life into the grave, an'—an' that Old Marc done it."

Overcome by the words she had thrown at him so deliberately, Bishop flung away, and the girl, quaking at what was about to happen, heard him running along the shore toward his shack.

It seemed to Polly Hopkins that every minute was an hour long, and every second filled with intolerable anxiety. Would the soft-hearted Larry repent and surrender the prize she longed to get her fingers on?

In extreme nervousness she went from one thing to another, never finishing what she began. She paced the hut floor until she was dripping wet with apprehensiveness. She had no means of knowing when Lye and Larry would come; so she dared not stir from the shack.

Many times she shoved aside the window blind and looked out. But the world outside was wrapped in a white silence. She could not even glimpse the peaked roof of a fisherman's hut, for between her and the Silent City was a flowing curtain of snow, the flakes falling like feathers from an open bag.

Larry would keep his word, she told herself over and over. She was glad it was such a night! The better could the squatters carry out their death plan.

Unnoticed by the girl, the wood burned to embers in the stove, and the hut grew colder by degrees. In one of her half hours of measuring the shanty's length, she halted, breathing on her frost-bitten fingers. She drew about her shoulders the blanket which had covered Wee Jerry in his hut days.

Her mind brought back to the baby away off in some unknown place, she cried weakly as she replenished the fire. Had the wicked ones of the earth made Jerry forget Daddy Hopkins who up in Auburn was ignorant of his whereabouts? Many times Polly had taken up her pencil to write him of the child, but it always dropped from her fingers before it reached the paper. Daddy could not do anything; and she would not add to his heavy burden.

She was at the stove, her cold, stiff fingers spread over it, when the sound of footsteps outside sent her headlong to the door. Appallingly terrified, she dragged it open.

Then, in deadening silence, Lye Braeger and Larry Bishop carried a large bundle through the doorway and threw it down on Polly's bed.

Heavy-lidded, the girl gazed upon it, her eyes widening in joy, joy at the thought of Old Marc's misery; joy at the thought of getting even. The frightful emotion that surged through her bore relation only by contrast to the delights of a few months back, when her willing legs had trotted the country over to help every one that needed her. It wasn't the same Polly at all. This Polly lifted her foot and kicked the bundle none too lightly.

"We had a h—l of a time gettin' 'er here, Poll," growled Lye Braeger. "Outside it's like if a million crazy devils was howlin' over the hills. But we brought 'er just the same! Now do what you like with 'er, brat!"

White teeth gleamed through the maniacal smile that parted the girl's lips. At last! She had not lived through interminable days for nothing!

"Scoot out, you!" she ordered, waving her hand at them, "an' keep a watch about till I get done!"

Braeger made for the door as if anxious to be gone; but Larry Bishop held to the spot where he stood.

"She's a woman, Polly Hopkins," he muttered, his eyes turning from the cot to the rigid girl, "if she is Old Marc's wife. He's home too, so Lye says!"

"What do I care where the pup is?" she thrust in vehemently. "'Course she's a woman! So be I; an' so were your dead Betsy."

Then she stamped her foot tempestuously.

"Get out of here an' watch for MacKenzie an' his folks," she snapped. "It's about time he were stormin' the Silent City, I'm thinkin'."

Roughly she shoved the men out into the blizzard and closed the door. Then she stood with her back to it, deep sobs racking her body.

Now as she had almost died, and Wee Jerry too, so would Marcus MacKenzie. The vicious hope that she could see him writhe in his grief took possession of her.

Distraughtly she placed the bar across the door, making sure it was locked. Then, creeping to the cot, she gazed down at the wet bundle. There, where she had helped Oscar Bennett over dark rough places into the light of Eternity, lay the dearest dear of her bitterest enemy.

-:- Things Seen and Heard -:-

It now begins to look as though a settlement of the coal strike was near. On March 31 450,000 soft coal miners quite work, and since that time very little coal has been mined. It is expected that Michigan coal miners will be at work the latter part of the week. We are wondering if the price of coal will go down now. It will take a lot of coal to fill the empty bins and with the railroad strike still on it is liable to be some time before coal moves.

Over in Cass county they are using sawdust for fuel owing to the shortage of coal. There is only 400 tons of coal in that county and the fuel administrator of that county has asked the dealers to supply only one-half ton to each family.

The People's party is the name of a new party that will be in the field for the next presidential election. On another page of this issue appears an announcement sent out from New York city by J. H. Chandler.

The coal strike has already cost the people of this country millions of dollars and may cost that much more before the winter is over. The miners themselves will have to work a good many years to make up what they have lost in wages. The present agreement only last for seven months, when differences again may mean another strike. In the meantime what is the government going to do to avoid a repetition? From talk heard on every hand the people are becoming weary of a congress that does not seem to be able to cope with questions that are throttling industries and making it almost impossible for American labor to live.

Ypsilanti needs rain almost as bad as it needs coal. According to reports Milan had a nice rain yesterday afternoon. It looks as if the weather man had a peeve on and was taking it out on this section.

Old Sol certainly turned out the hot waves to us yesterday. Forced the mercury to race up to 92. Everybody had their collars off.

The new hotel is coming fine. Looks like a building that Ypsilanti will be proud of. Some criticism though on the way they are laying the east and north walls. Just common brick. Heard a fellow say that it would look like a bob-tailed rooster. Oh, well, can't suit everybody.

What is the matter with Washtenaw politicians? The good old days of hand-shaking seems to be a thing of the past. One thing we are thankful for—we don't have to smoke any of those two-for-five cigars

Yes, Townsend did vote to retain Newberry in the senate, and so did a majority of the voters of Michigan. It was a great crime for Charlie to stand by the voters of this state. In our judgment he would have been a coward if he had done otherwise.

SEN. CHARLES E. TOWNSEND

The man who represents Michigan in the U. S. senate, and because of the fact he did the honorable thing, certain factions in the Republican party are out after his scalp at the November election.

Several times we have heard the remark that there is no such place as the right side of the street, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle said there is no such thing as hell. If that is the case where can we wish the joy riders to go? You tell 'em, Dick.

RAYS DEFEAT MILAN NINE BY 4 TO 3.

The Ray Battery nine defeated the Milan Independents Wednesday afternoon on the local lot by a score of 4-3. Both teams put over a run in the first inning and the Rays repeated in the fifth and then in the sixth put over two on errors. The Milanese made one in the seventh and ninth but were unable to overcome the Rays' lead. Only one earned run was made in the game, that coming in the fifth when the Rays put one across on two clean singles, a steal and a sacrifice. Rynearson pitched an easy game and the other eight battery makers did not exert themselves overly much.

No game has been scheduled for this week although two teams have signified their willingness to come. It is understood that there will be a game here, and the announcement will be made later.

DAVIS REUNION.

Mrs. Robb was the guest of honor, being the only daughter in the Davis family and who has not been here for several years. A sumptuous chicken dinner was served and a most enjoyable day was spent by all present.

A freight train loaded with stone for the Lutheran church being built here left the track Saturday afternoon. It was necessary to send to Detroit for a derrick to get the train back on the track.

Police officials of Sault Ste. They followed him, seized their prisoner, and had him outside before Lutzy convinced them that he was in his own home.

KELSEY WHEEL NINE IS EASY FOR RAY BATTERY

The Ray Battery won from the Kelsey Wheel nine of Detroit here Sunday afternoon at the Ray park by a score of 9-3. The Rays put over five runs in the seventh inning, three in the first and one in the second, while Rynearson held the visitors helpless until the later innings, when he let up and permitted them to garner three runs, one in the sixth and two in the eighth.

The Detroiters could get only six hits off Rynie, their runs being due to errors. The locals bunched their hits off Kudron in the first and seventh.

The game proved easy for the Rays from the first inning and with little opposition ran along until the seventh, when every Batteryite had a chance at bat and their combined efforts brought in five runs.

JOIN THE PEOPLE'S PARTY.

We believe that the Republican and Democratic parties are not controlled by nor are they in sympathy with the great majority of the voters of this country. That the present economic conditions and the welfare of the nation demands the organization of a third party (a party of the people, by the people and for the people.)

The following plan of organization has been adopted:

First—The organization of units in every precinct and township. These units to serve as a nucleus for the party organization at election time.

If you are in sympathy with this movement we earnestly request that you call a meeting of your neighbors. Elect a secretary and forward to this office names and addresses of those present, together with a copy of any resolution that is passed, the time and place of the next meeting and a notatiin regarding the sentiment in your community toward this campaign.

Second—We are seeking financial support as the progress of this campaign will depend largely upon the amount of publicity that we secure. Space in the public press, the rent of halls and many other expenses incident to this campaign will entail a large outlay.

The most important situation that faces the people of the Untied States is the political situation and the reason that is true is because every other situation, every other condition, every other phase of American life depends on and is entirely subordinate to and corollay of the political situation.

Constancy!

Eileen was annoyed; she felt the family honor had been badly stained. It was Dora's fault, so she spoke to her about it.

"It's no use denying it, Dora. Although it was too dark for me to see who it was, I distinctly saw some man kiss you in the garden."

Dora was modern, and didn't appreciate her sister's argument.

"I don't see why," she said. "I've often seen George kiss you."

"Oh, that's different. I'm engaged to George. I allow nobody but him to kiss me."

"Exactly," said Dora. "I allow nobody but George to kiss me!"

Famous Tracker Dead.

Perhaps the oldest of the Australian aborigines has lately died at the age of 101. His name was Jack Schoolie, and he was commonly known as King Jacky.

He was known all over the district of Pindari where he was living, for his skill with cattle and horses, up to the age of ninety, and for the instinct of observation by which he could follow a track that an ordinary man could not see at all.

Jacky was a full-blooded aboriginal, and perhaps the last of the men who linked together the old life of the naive with the new life of civilization.

BETTER BABIES CONTEST AT MICHIGAN STATE FAIR

A drive to obtain a large entry of babies from the local districts of the state for the better babies contest at the Michigan State fair, opening Sept. 1, has been started by G. W. Dickinson, secretary-manager of the exposition.

In connection with the better babies contest a general educational program "care of babies" is being outlined for the mothers who bring their children to the fair. Dr. E. P. Mills, of Highland Park, will be superintendent of the department again this year.

"It is important to the success of the fair that we secure a large number of entries in the better babies contest from the rural districts," said Mr. Dickinson, "because you know this fair has to be representative of all Michigan.

The plan of the fair administration this year is to go farther than the ordinary blue ribbon which goes to the perfect children and a thorough medical examination will be given every baby entered in the contest. Definite scientific advice will be offered the parents following the examination.

The competition this year is divided into six classes: Babies from rural districts and towns of 1,000 and less populaton, babies from cities and towns of over 1,000 and less than 10,000 population, babies from cities over 10,000 population, twins, triplets and champions.

Examinations in the contest are scheduled to begin Friday, Sept. 1, and awards will be made on Saturday, Sept. 9, the day preceding conclusion of the fair. No child suffering from an acute or constitutional disease will be allowed to be entered.

Entries for the contest will close August 30, two days previous to the opening of the fair, and should be mailed to G. W. Dickinson, 502 Bowles Building, Detroit.

Fordson TRACTOR

"Yes I've more Time for Myself Since I Got a Fordson"

The Fordson Tractor is taking much of the drudgery out of farm life; it is solving the labor problem; it is reducing the cost of preparing land by almost one half of what it was with horses; and it is saving one third to one half of the farmer's time; and making farm life more attractive.

The Fordson will run your threshing machine—and at the most opportune time for you. It will operate the milking machines, saw your wood, fill your silo, pump the water, and take care of every kind of belt work—

And don't forget—it will plow six to eight acres in a ten hour day, handling two plows with ease.

Thus the Fordson is the ideal year-round tractor. It will pay for its fall and winter keep in many ways.

There's a big story to tell you about the Fordson—and a true one—come in and get the facts. Or, if you prefer, telephone or drop us a card and we will bring them to you.
